

Social and Personal

Belated as our spring has been, and as few the opportunities as it has afforded for the wearing of real spring gowns, there is every evidence of a long, warm summer, and very dainty and charming are the gowns that are being made in anticipation thereof. As I think I have stated on several occasions, the color and the trimmings of the gowns are the most important features, and in this respect, the gowns of the season are quite so smart. To vary the effect, underlinings are often made of color, and, for these, both chambray and muslin are the most popular. The gowns are much liked, but there is a charm about an all-white summer costume that nothing else quite attains. As a result we see muslins of all sorts, plain and embroidered, with trimmings both of lace and the lovely hand work that takes the form of embroidery, tucking and fancy stitches, and often combines them with lace.

The more elaborate imported gowns, designed for garden party wear, for dinners and the like, almost defy description, so intricately are they made; but there are many simpler ones that, to my eye, are quite as charming and which do not need to be described. In the case of the latter, the simplicity of the design, in spite of the fact that the season is one of elaboration and that the designers are determined that such it shall remain. Lace, with embroidery worked onto the material itself, make an exceedingly elegant combination, and cannot be overlooked, difficult as the accomplishment may be.

All sorts of thin shoulder wraps are seen, and are very pretty in the thin, summer fabrics, as well as practical, for every woman knows that often the lightest wrap is all that is required; yet there is a distinct want felt if there be none at all. By the way, we are seeing a good many of the little capes that match the skirts, of which I have written in previous letters, and very attractive they are. A most tasteful visiting costume of chiffon voile is all in tender pearl gray, with trimming of cream, and shows a lot of these simple round capes most effectively used.

The skirt is the simple, full skirt, one that is gathered at the belt, and is harmoniously trimmed with bands of tulle, in varying widths. The blouse is full, and droops a little over the skirt, and is made with very wide, full sleeves and a box plait of chiffon at the front that gives a vest effect. Over it is worn the plain little shoulder cape that is banded to match the skirt, and which terminates at the edges of the box plait.

As I saw the gown, it was worn by a slender young matron at a recent fashioning, and as simple as it is, it stood out among all the more elaborate toilettes, conspicuous because of its perfect taste and quiet elegance. The last accompanying it was of the gray satin straw, with trimming of palest yellow roses, which made a most effective note of color. The trimming, too, is worthy of a special word, inasmuch as it suits the style of gown to perfection, and is in effect, as the skirt is in cut.

Next week I will tell you of some of the new linen suits and of how elaborate much of the open work embroidery is, and also something about the new styles in costume, both of which are full of interest just now. For to-day I have space only to add that the summer bids fair to be an enchanting one, if only women and girls prove themselves equal to the demand and wear their garments well. On the one hand, we have these dainty creations of filmy stuffs; on the other, the sturdy things and severe outlines demanded for the hours of active sport and busy life. To state that the one to the other and to carry one's self well in both requires no mean amount of skill, no little power of adaptation; yet to fall in to produce pictures, sorry indeed. Whether or not the adaptability of womanhood will be equal to the strain is as yet unproven. Let us hope that it will triumph here, as it has done in many more vital situations, and that our girls will drop their golf sticks when they don 130 dancing gowns; that our auto-driving women will not carry the strained expression of the motor carriage when they enter the dining room gowned in costumes reminiscent of an age that knew nothing of speed runs nor of record trips.

Sayers-Guy Wedding Brilliant Event.

One of the most fashionable weddings of the season was held at 11 P. M. yesterday, April 27th, by the Rev. Dr. Robert Strange, of St. Paul's Church, in the marriage of Miss Fannie Peyton Guy to Mr. Robert Sayers, of Wytheville, Va.

The bride, who came into the church with her uncle, Mr. Jackson Guy, and was given away by him, wore a lovely gown of white crepe de chine upon a tulle foundation with garniture of old point lace. Her wedding veil was one worn by her aunt, Mrs. Jackson Guy, on the occasion of Mrs. Guy's marriage. Her flowers were a shower of lilies of the valley.

Miss Anne Wyatt Guy, the sister of the bride, and her maid of honor, wore a very smart frock of accordion-plated mousseline de sole and held a bouquet of pink roses, with floating ends of pink chiffon.

Mrs. Mary Jackson Guy, the bride's mother, wore a handsome gown of black crepe de chine. Mrs. Jackson Guy was in white tulle lace over silk and chiffon.

Dr. Samuel R. Sayers, Jr., of Marlow, Va., was best man to the groom, who was also attended by Mr. Clarence Trinkle and Mr. William Trinkle, of Wytheville; Mr. John H. Guy, of Richmond; Mr. Guy Davis, of Norfolk, and Mr. Lloyd Kent, of Wytheville.

After the ceremony the bridal party were delightfully entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Guy, No. 107 West Franklin Street. Guests from a distance who came to Richmond for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. H. Roper and Miss Hazel Roper, of Austinville; Misses Sayers, of Max Meadows; Miss Barclay, of Lexington, Va.; Miss Virginia Wise, of Williamsburg; Mrs. Elton R. Brown, of Watertown, New York; Miss Bessie Scott, of Ewell, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Fontaine Brown, of Charleston, W. Va.; Miss Mary Preston Kent, of Wytheville; Miss Mary Ransom, of Staunton, Va.; Miss Susan Webb and Mrs. J. C. Spencer, of Williamsburg; and Mrs. Edwin G. Booth, Miss Booth and Mrs. Thompson Booth, of Carter's Grove, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Sayers will take a Northern tour, after which they will reside in

Beware of Substitution.

Owing to the wonderful popularity which JELL-O has attained since its introduction, many inferior imitations have been placed on the market by unscrupulous manufacturers, who hope to make a profit from their goods sold in competition with JELL-O on the strength of our extensive advertising.

Beware of the grocer who tries to sell you something else, claiming it is "Just as good" as JELL-O. No honest grocer will offer to substitute for JELL-O.

JELL-O is sold and used more extensively throughout the world than any similar food product.

If your grocer can't supply you, please send his name.

ROCK ME TO SLEEP.

BY ELIZABETH AKERS.

Mrs. Elizabeth Akers Allen was born in Strong, Me., in 1832. Her family name was Chase. She was reared in Farmington. At the age of 12 she was writing for publication, and at 15 she was known by the nom de plume of Florence Percy. Her first volume of verse appeared in 1855, and soon afterward she wrote "Rock Me to Sleep," though it was not published till later.

The author's account of the circumstances attending the writing of the poem is as follows: "The lines voiced the longing of a young woman for her mother whom she had lost. I was myself the young woman. I was about to sail for Europe, when I remembered that I had sent nothing recently to the Post. I opened my portfolio and took out several poems and sketches which I submitted to my mother-in-law, who told me to send any one of them but 'Rock Me to Sleep.' I did not consider that as embodying my best work but concluded to send it, and people seem to have liked it. After a time an animated discussion sprang up as to the authorship of the poem, during which it was guessed and distorted in the most ridiculous fashion, but I paid little attention to it and it finally died out."

Since then, for professional purposes she has been known as Elizabeth Akers. She married her present husband, William H. Allen, LL.D., a man of literary reputation, formerly president of Grand College, the residence of the Allen is in Tusculum, a few miles outside New York city.

Mrs. Allen has been a constant worker down to the present year, and has published quite a large number of books. It is her habit to state that she has personally revised the text of her poem, as here printed, and has declared it to be as originally written, 42 years ago.

BACKWARD, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again just for to-night!
Mother, come back from the echoes shore,
Take me again to your heart as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care;
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair;
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep;
Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!
I am so weary of toil and of tears,—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain;
Take them, and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay;
Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away;
Weary of sowing for others to reap;
Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue,
Mother, O mother, my heart calls for you!
Many a summer the grass has grown green,
Blossomed and faded, our faces between;
Yet, with strong yearning and passionate pain,
Long I to-night for your presence again;
Come from the silence so long and so deep,
Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

Over my heart, in the days that have flown,
No love like mother-love ever has shone;
No other worship abides and endures,
Faithful, unselfish, and patient, like yours;
None like a mother can charm away pain
From the sick soul and the world-weary brain.
Slumber's soft calms o'er my heavy lids creep;
Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

Come, let your brown hair, just lighted with gold,
Fall on your shoulder again as of old;
Let it drop over my forehead to-night,
Shading my faint eyes away from the light;
For with its sunny-edged shadows once more
Haply will throng the sweet visions of yore;
Lovingly, softly, its bright billows sweep;
Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

Mother, dear mother, the years have been long
Since I last listened your lullaby song;
Sing, then, and unto my soul it shall seem
Womanhood's years have been only a dream.
Clasped to your heart in a loving embrace,
With your light lashes just sweeping my face,
Never hereafter to wake or to weep,—
Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

At the Woman's Club.

One of the most charming receptions of the year at the Woman's Club was that held last afternoon in honor of Dr. Robert Sayers, of Richmond, Scotland, who are spending some time at Union Theological Seminary.

Dr. Sayers was introduced most happily and gracefully by Mrs. Thomas C. Johnson, of the Seminary, who was the chairman of the afternoon. His talk, which followed, though informal in its nature, caught the rapt attention and went straight to the hearts of all.

The consensus of opinion voiced the extreme pleasure felt by the ladies at having such a distinguished and finished scholar with them.

Mrs. Stalker proved an equally attractive guest. After the doctor's talk she sang several lovely Scotch airs full of tenderness and sweetness, which characterized Scotch ballads above all others.

The rain did not prevent the assembling of a large crowd who enjoyed the occasion to the utmost. Guests of the chairman were: Mrs. W. T. Richardson, Mrs. Mann S. Valentine, Mrs. C. A. Elston, Mrs. W. W. Moore, Mrs. James P. Smith, Mrs. John S. Munce, Mrs. Albert Small and Judge James Keith.

Mrs. George Wayne Anderson served lemonade and Mrs. Charles L. Robins secured tea.

Week-End Excursion.

Society is much interested in the week-end excursion to Williamsburg, Va., to be given by the Industrial Chapter of Holy Trinity Church, Saturday next, April 30th.

Those going will leave Richmond by the 9 o'clock fast train, and as Richmond College will play against William and Mary College on Saturday, the baseball team will go down from Richmond with the excursionists. Many of their friends will also join the party, and many of the girls of the city will have parties of friends, who will witness the game and visit points of interest in the colonial capital.

A delightful lunch and dinner will be served in the house of Bruton Church by the Woman's Auxiliary, and as the housewives of Williamsburg are remembered most delightfully by Richmond visitors, it goes without saying that both meals will be delicious.
